

JangoMail Tutorial

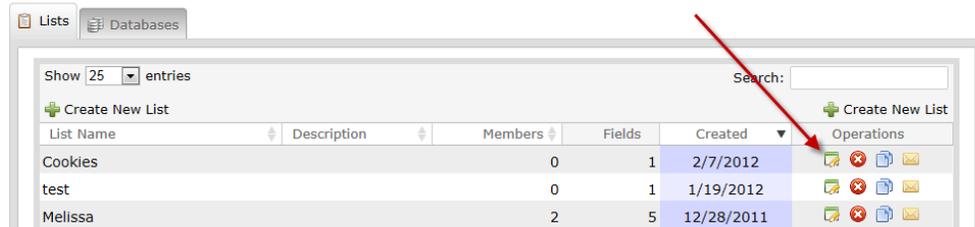

Using the Autoresponder Feature of JangoMail

Autoresponders work with JangoMail's LISTS section. This section allows you to create a List, define field for the List, and then add members into the List. After creating the List, you can define Autoresponders for the List, such that emails will automatically go out to new List members based on specific time intervals.

1. Create a List to store your members.
 - a. Navigate to the LISTS section.
 - b. Click Create New List.
 - c. Type in a name for the List (example: ABC Test List), and then click the Save button.
2. Add a few members to your List.
 - a. Click the Add New Member icon.
 - b. Add members to the List individually. Add yourself to the List. Add a few other test email addresses as well.
3. Create the message that you want to use as an autoresponder.

after joining the list.

Example: If you set your autoresponder to send the message 3 hours after joining, then the email will be sent to all List members when the time is 3 hours past the member's Submission Date. If you set your autoresponder to 0 hours, the email will be sent immediately.

How do new subscribers join your List? You can place a signup form on your web site which will add new subscribers directly to your JangoMail List. See Create an Opt In Form under the List settings icon. New subscribers can also send a blank email to your jangomail.com email account with the word "subscribe" in the Subject line.
